ASTON MARTIN

VANTAGE V12

Story: Terence Maddison Photos: Aston Martin

The new Aston Martin V12 breathes a fresh breath into the Aston Martin line, by giving the new Aston Martin the best of what the company has to offer. A crisp responsive frame that handles corners as if the tires were super glued to the ground, coupled with all the power of cramming the flagship V12 engine found in the DBS into the Vantage. This car has enough good looks and charm to make even James Bond feel flushed and nervous. The company wanted to take its rightful place as a leader in the supercar world and I think they hit the bull's-eye with this one.

Looking at the car, it has the same beautiful aesthetics we've come to expect from the fine British automaker with some noticeable aerodynamic changes. These include a louvered hood, carbon fiber front, and rear air dams with really stylish side skirts borrowed from Aston Martin Racing. The car is also wider than the V8 Vantage which gives the car a more race bred stance, all the while still staying true to the understated design Aston Martin has employed throughout the years. The interior of the Aston Martin also holds true to the lavish styling that we have seen in past models; alcantara leather and suede are used throughout as well as carbon fiber accents.

The interior is surprisingly comfortable yet you still get the feeling that you are in a supercar.

The Aston Martin Vantage V12 is just as comfortable being thrown around the track as it is driving your Kitten to an extravagant dinner affair. The V12 Vantage has ample power and a smooth torque available throughout its 6500 red line. The V12 pushes out 510 horse power and 420lbs of torque at 5750 rpm. That power means this Vantage has more get up and go than any other Aston Martin to date, excluding the one-77 model. It has impressive performance stats. It goes from standing still to 60mph in just 4.1 seconds and has a top speed of 190 mph.

“THIS CAR HAS BEEN DESIGNED TO BE A PURE
SPORTS CAR.”

It has a 6 speed transmission mounted behind the driver for better weight distribution. The Aston Martin V12 Vantage also has a powerful lateral acceleration of 1.3g on the skid pad. It has the classic sports car layout of rear wheel drive and a front mounted engine.

The Aston Martin V12 Vantage is manufactured alongside its DBS, DB9 and V8 Vantage brethren in the state of the art production facility located at Aston Martin Headquarters in Gaydon, Warwickshire. This facility combines years of handcraftsmanship with a high tech manufacturing process of the 20th century.

If you like what you've read so far, you had better be ready to pull out your check book and get one, that is if you live in Europe. Alas, we won't be getting this machine on our shores. The production run on this jewel of a car is limited to 1,000 over the life of this car. I am sure there are already fans of the car clamoring to get their very own Vantage V12. The limited run makes this a truly exclusive sports car.

The price of the Aston Martin V-12 Vantage is $247,000 US Dollars putting it firmly in the race for clients that are looking at the Lamborghini Gallardo, the Porsche 911 GT2, and Porsche GT3.

Aston has hit the mark with this finely crafted machine and it is sure to win the hearts of many adoring fans. Who can't fall in love with a light weight car with the biggest possible engine packed into it and still providing a luxurious cockpit? I know what I'm putting on my wish list.

8 SIMPLE WAYS TO BE A GENTLEMAN

With an ever changing world around us, one thing will always remain the same...how a man should treat a woman. If you want to earn the affection, love and respect of a lady, you have to behave like a gentleman.

It is important to honor your gender roles, and heighten the attraction between you and your amour by implementing these 8 simple ways to be a gentleman.

With a little thought and alot of charm, you can create magic between you and any woman to enjoy a love affair that others only read about. So listen carefully and don't delay...Be a True Gentleman today.

Manners Matter: Society maybe changing, but social grace will always be in style. "Please" and "Thank-you's" are a very important way to show that you consider her and others. All women will admire a man with social decency. It will show that you appreciate the little things she does for you too.

Compliment Her: Every woman likes to be acknowledged for the beautiful things about her. A sincere compliment at anytime will go along way with any woman. If you make her feel beautiful when she's with you, she will want to spend more time around you. A big plus!

Open Doors: The old adage, "Chivalry is not dead," is only true if men continue to keep it so. Remember, that a woman feels taken care of when a man takes the time to be one step ahead of her and opens doors for her, car, restaurant, anywhere, in fact. When you don't, it shows that you're selfish, and not keeping her in mind. Bottom-line.

Surprise Her with a Gift: Bring her flowers for no reason or surprise her with a token of your affection; jewelry, clothing, perfume, lingerie. (Something feminine, not general products). This reflects your romantic side and will make her feel special. A true gentleman knows how to make any woman feel special. And you can do this anytime!

Listen Attentively: It is commonly known that women engage in lengthier conversations than men. So to earn her respect and love, pay extra attention when she speaks. Engage in her thoughts and offer sincere responses. She will feel more connected to you and believe that you are a great guy who really cares... simply by listening to her.

Be Sensitive to Her Feelings: Women are more emotional than men. When a man understands this, and makes a point to curb his sarcastic comments or abrupt responses, a woman will sense that he cares about how she feels. Careless things said can hurt a woman's feelings, so men should be a little more thoughtful of the things they say when with her. You can be "macho" around your friends, but let your sensitive side shine when around her.

Don't Bed Her on the First Date: I know this might be tough, but if you want to sweep a woman off her feet, you have to let her know you respect her and the potential relationship. Hold off on the nookie, give her a great kiss good-night, and call her the next day to plan the next date. The longer you keep her waiting, the better. Yes, it does work both ways! It will keep her wanting more, and wondering what you're thinking. The anticipation will work wonders!

Always Bear the Expense: If you want a woman to respect you as the man, and to honor her role as the woman, it is vital that you don't let her pay for anything. If you don't, it is a gender role reversal that undermines your attempt at being her sultor. Pay for dinner, vacations, and novelty items if on an outing together e.g. ice cream, flowers, or coffee. She will feel like your princess, and she won't want to be without you. And this isn't about the money or being taken advantage of. This is about being a man who knows how to take care of a woman and make her feel like one. Even if you're married and you share funds, it is important you still be the one to pay. It exercises your care-taker role and your woman will be more attracted to you because of it. Trust me.

A low-angle, upward-looking shot of a long, modern escalator. The escalator is the central focus, leading the eye towards the top of the frame. The sky is a vibrant blue with scattered white clouds, and a bright sun is visible in the upper right corner, creating a lens flare effect. The overall mood is one of aspiration and upward movement.

Think
BIG...

Start SMART.

Whether you're a KASANOVA in the making or simply one with a great business concept... The road to success has to be a carefully chartered course, that is well thought out and well strategized. It begins with the legal formation of the correct corporation to protect your billion dollar idea.

When starting a new business you have several options of how to form the organization:

1. SOLE PROPRIETORSHIP: A sole proprietorship is an unincorporated business owned by a single person. It is also the most common type of business formed. Sole proprietorships are easy and inexpensive to create and operate. There is no need to hire an attorney, unless of course you have other reasons to, or just register with the government. The company is not required to file separate tax returns, and all profits and losses are reported on the owner's personal return. In some states and for certain businesses, a business license may be required. Most states, however, will require that the owner register the business name, if it is different from their own as a d/b/a, "Doing Business As." The key point here is that sole proprietorships have some major disadvantages. The owner is responsible for all business debts, and will be held personally liable in the event of a lawsuit. Also, sole proprietorships have limited financing and funding options. They generally run off debt, and have no stock or memberships to sell.

2. GENERAL PARTNERSHIP: General Partnerships, where more than one person own and operate the business but have not formed a legal corporation, have two major advantages; they do not pay taxes themselves and they are easy to form. Of course as the pendulum swings, the disadvantages far outweigh the benefits. Liability is shared by each owner, and each partner is personally liable for the debts of the enterprise whether or not they all caused them. Funding too, may be difficult because the firm cannot sell shares as a corporation does, and all capital needs must be met by contributions from the partners or by borrowing, again increasing debt. Management has to be carefully outlined in a formal contract, otherwise potential disagreements may arise, with all partners having an equal say in running the business. It's better to delegate responsibilities upfront and in a contract to avoid these types of conflicts. The other pitfall for owners in a general partnership is that each owner may only transfer the value of the interest in the business, not the interest itself. Therefore, whoever receives the transferred value, may not have the right to be a partner in the firm, or even work there. General partnerships are not taxable entities, and all income and losses are passed through to the partners and reported on their personal income taxes.

3. LIMITED LIABILITY PARTNERSHIP: Limited Liability Partnership (LLP) is a type of general partnership; however, the partners are not liable for the debts of the partnership. To form an LLP a statement of qualification must be filed in the state of formation. LLP's are also required to file annual reports, so business documenting must be strictly accounted for. An LLP is not a taxable entity though and retains many of the same attributes of a partnership, and it has the right to choose its duration, meaning it can, but does not have to, survive the dissociation of a member.

4. PROFESSIONAL PARTNERSHIP: Professional Partnership (P.C.) offers greater liability protection than a partnership. For example, in the event of a three party professional partnership formation, and one of its members commits malpractice, the assets of the PC will be at risk and only the personal assets of the offending member as well, not the two innocent partners. Also, shareholders are generally not personally liable for the debts of the organization, such as leases or bank loans. There are some limitations to Professional Corporations; all partners/shareholders must belong to the same profession, and valued employees are not permitted to own stock.

The formation and legal technicalities of P.C.'s can be expensive and time-consuming. Tax issues can become complicated, as they are separate entities, like any corporation, and must pay taxes on profits, and then shareholders must also pay taxes on their dividends, double taxation. A loop hole is to pay out profits as salary, however all remaining profits are taxable. PCs must be careful to calculate profits accurately and pay them before year's end. This chore can be tedious, and any errors may cause unnecessary tax liability.

5. CLOSE CORPORATION: C Corporations ("Close Corporation or Closely Held Corporation") are referred to companies whose stock is not traded on a stock exchange, also known as a "privately held company." Most close corporations are small; however some are huge, for example Hallmark Cards, Inc or Mars, Inc. (maker of Mars candy bars.) State laws regulate corporations, but federal law determines their tax status. State provisions of formation of C corps vary from state to state, but there are some similar themes they share in common. C corps generally protect the rights of all shareholders, even minority shareholders, by requiring unanimous vote of all shareholders regarding major executive decisions, such as setting salaries, choosing officers, and dividend pay-outs. It could grant any shareholder veto power over all important corporate decisions. Transfer restrictions allow shareholders to offer their shares for sale, only after first giving the right to the other owners to buy them. Dispute resolution also allows the shareholders to agree in advance that all shareholders have the right to dissolve the corporation if some particular event occurs, whether it is a dramatic decrease in revenues, or if one or more of the owners behave "oppressively" or "unfairly". C corps are generally more flexible and can operate without a board of directors, a formal set of bylaws, or annual shareholder meetings.

6. S CORPORATION: S Corporations (S Corps) have the best of all worlds: the limited liability of a corporation and the tax status of a partnership. An S Corp is not a taxable entity, and all profits and losses are passed through to shareholders, who pay tax at their individual rates. It avoids double taxation of a regular corporation (called a "C Corporation"). The major restrictions of S Corps are that there can only be one type of stock class, there can only be 75 shareholders, shareholders cannot be partnerships or corporations, only individuals, estates, charities or trusts, and shareholders have to be citizens or residents of the U.S, not non-resident aliens. There are some states that treat an S corp. like a C Corp, and these companies must pay state corporate tax. Check with your state officials to determine the terms of your corporate formation.

Think BIG... Start Smart.

7. LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANY: Limited Liability Companies (LLC) offer the limited liability of a corporation and the tax status of a partnership, without the disadvantages of an S corporation. To form an LLC, you generally need two documents; a charter and an operating agreement. A charter is a short document with basic company information, such as name, address and must be filed with the Secretary of State in your jurisdiction. An operating agreement is not always required, however it does outline the rights and obligations of the members and by attorney recommendation can aid in any dispute resolution. Like a corporation, LLC's members are not personally liable for debts of the company. Like a partnership, the income flows through the company and to the individual members, avoiding the double taxation. Unlike S corps, LLC's may have partners that are corporations, partnerships or non-resident aliens. They are permitted to have different class of stock, and are not required to hold annual meetings or maintain a minute's book. LLC's may be complicated to form, so it is important to consult a licensed attorney or accountant for this service. In an LLC, the operating agreement can outline many of the terms of the organization, specifically transferability rights. If the operating agreement is silent on the issue, a unanimous vote will be required prior to any of the owners formally transferring their ownership rights. An LLC is also permitted to continue operation, even after the withdrawal, whether voluntarily or by death, of one of its members, however, the LLC must pay the departing member the value of their interest. If an LLC decides to go public, it would lose its favorable tax status. It is crucially important to further research, decide the best corporate formation and direction of your company, while considering all tax advantages prior to doing so.

With a plethora of formation options, it may be difficult to choose which is right for you. This article is meant for entertainment and information purposes only; all information is deemed reliable but not guaranteed. Please consult with a licensed professional attorney and/or accountant to correctly start and form your new business. Good Luck KASANOVA...Your Dream is Waiting.

10 SIGNS THAT SHE'S INTERESTED IN YOU...

*Sometimes when a woman wants you, it can be very obvious. But some women are not so bold. Here are some clues that will let you know that she wants to be more than just friends...

• She Will Keep Eye Contact with You: When a woman wants you, she wants to be the center of your attention. When you have your eyes on her, she has what she wants. She is definitely interested if she locks eyes with you, and keeps them there.

• She Laughs and Smiles A lot with You: A woman that enjoys your company and likes you will clearly show it by laughing and smiling when around you. She can't help but show that you make her feel good.

• She Wants to Know More about You: When a woman likes you and sees you as a potential suitor for her, she will ask questions about your life, friends, family, and work. The more she knows about you, the closer she feels to you, making you boyfriend material.

• She Will Always Look Great: If a woman likes a man, she will make sure she looks great every time you see her. Your attraction to her is important to her, and it will show by how she dresses and presents herself when you're around.

• She Will Communicate Openly With You: Women usually only get close to their best friends, so if she is talking to you about things going on in her life or her thoughts, she is definitely thinking you could be more than just her friend.

• She Will Let You Be Yourself: When a woman genuinely likes you for you, she will accept you for who you are and let you be yourself. You won't have to worry about her judging you, because you'll already feel fully accepted by her. This should make you feel great!

• She Will Be Available: A woman won't spend time with someone if she doesn't want to. So if she's making herself available to text, talk, or get together, she is definitely into you.

• She Will Go Out With You: If a girl is into you, she will want to be seen on your arm. She will accept your invitations to almost all dates, outings, and events. So go ahead and ask, if she accepts... Then you know she's closer to "yours" than you think.

• She Will Hang Out With Your Friends: Every good girl knows that she has to get along with your buddies. So if she's cool when she's hanging with the group, chances are she's trying to make a good impression on them, to seal the deal with you.

• She Will Sleep with You: Bottom line is if a woman won't go to bed with you, you have no chance. If she does, she is definitely attracted to you, and open to see where things will go with you.

So next time you're with your Sexy Kitten, clue in on these tell tale signs to know for sure if you have a real chance with the girl before you make your move. What have you got to lose?...But Her.

THROW CARE TO THE WIND WITH THESE SPORTS.

GO AHEAD, WE DARE YOU, KASANOVA.

SKY DIVING:

Don't pussycat around the issue. We all need to jump out of a plane in the course of a lifetime. This is the sport for real men. Nothing scare you? Challenge yourself to edge out of a plane and just jump. Remember that scene in Point Break where undercover police officer Johnny Utah is woken up by his surf rat friends, told nothing, only to find himself on a plane and ready to jump at 30,000 feet plus? Yeah, we know you can do it.

Rustle up your friends and don't tell them what the hell is going on. Once you show up at the destination, they'll be too intimidated to back out. You'll seem like the ballsy friend.

Click over to www.skydiving.com and set up an appointment. Don't back out. Prove to yourself that you can do this. Good luck, Kasanova.

WHITEWATER RAFTING:

Available in Canada, California, Washington, Oregon, Colorado, all the Southwest states, most of the East Coast states, Costa Rica, and even South America, this sport is really the international way to see rivers. Go with a group or take a private tour. After gaining popularity over the past 30 years, this adrenaline junky sport is the truest way to get outdoors and wet. With six levels of river ratings, Roman numeral I being "easy" and VI being "un-runable," this sport offers a diverse array of options for athletes of all types.

Try out the company Rafting America at www.raftingamerica.com for excursions to over 30 destinations, including event options from bachelor trips to corporate team building.

RACE CAR DIVING:

We all love NASCAR but have you ever thought of really doing it? You can. Racing around a track at upwards of 100 mph might be just the thing to get you feeling young again. The danger of it is enticing. Not to mention the barely dressed promotions girls that hang out at the track constantly. Check out these options and put the pedal to the metal.

NASCAR Racing Experience: Located in North Carolina, and as fast as they come in the South, this company boasts the slogan, "As real as it gets." Offering anywhere from a 3-lap (track) ride, a 3-hour ride, or a 1 1/2 day experience, this car company has it all. Prices range from $120 to $2500, depending on your choice. This is right up any adrenaline junky's ally. Contact them at 1-877-RACE-LAP or www.nascarracingexperience.com.

Richard Petty Driving Experience: This executive NASCAR company allows drivers to purchase rides during the day of actual events. With offices in Charlotte, Las Vegas and Orlando, this corporation can take you and your buddies on the famous tracks of Daytona, Bristol, and Darlington. Book here at 1-800-237-3889 or www.drivepetty.com.

MOUNTAIN BIKING:

Looking for something brutish and arousing, but not reaching the dangers of sky diving? Try Mountain Biking. It's true that Lance Armstrong is one of the world's sexiest men. What is it about a bike that just screams fit? Biking is one of the most productive forms of exercise, only second to swimming. On a vacation and looking for that rush that the hotel pool just doesn't offer? Most mountain biking companies offer a bike, route, and trainer for a flat fee. Try this amazing company:

Haleakala Bike Company: Located on the prestigious Maui Island of Hawaii, this business offers the best in adrenaline attraction. Their tour will take you down the famous volcano of Haleakala during a Sunrise, Summit or Express tour. This ain't for the faint of heart. At 10,000 feet and biking all the way down, you'll get the blood rushing in one of the most beautiful settings of the world. Call toll free at 1-888-922-2453 or contact them at www.bikemaui.com.

If you're tired of the same boring vacation, spice things up with these sports. Let your woman know where you're going and what you're doing. She'll want you back so bad that the adrenaline will get you sporting in bed, too.

HIT THAT HIGH LIFE, KASANOVA.

Sunday FUNDAY

The Kama Sutra

What do you do every Sunday? It's time to have fun on your day off. Tell your sexy partner it's time to devote the entire day to one thing: Gettin' it on.

This is the newest column at Kasanova for a sex filled Sunday. Forget church or the usual family dinner. Do it in bed, in the pool, in the shower, or outdoors. Just as long as you do it... And do it well.

Here are our best tips for the Kama Sutra lifestyle. From the ancient days of India comes this amazing sex guide of Kama Sutra. With positions ranging from "easy" to "hard," standing, sitting, in the water, bed or ground, these positions can be for anyone. Tired of the usual missionary or doggie style? These sexual remedies will get you hitting the right spots for you and her.

The Stand-Up Session: Put your lady on a table, counter, washing machine or just hold her against the wall. Grab both legs and keep her sturdy with your hips. Her hand will be free. She can put you in her. Gently rock back and forth. When you have the right motion, get harder with it. Make sure you're interlocking your elbows with her knees. Women love the touch behind their knees, it's very sensual for them.

On the Edge: If you're a bed person, wake your woman up in the middle of the night. Kiss her neck and get her riled up. Slide her to the edge of the bed and kiss her from her chin to her toes. Push inside of her and hold her arms off the bed. Make out with her chest, women have to be turned on in several areas to get closer to climax. Enjoy the on-the-edge sensation.

Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon:

This position can be achieved in bed, on the floor (watch for rug burns, some girls like 'em), or even in water like the pool or bath. Splish, splash, this position is for the a-s-s. Bend your lady over and make sure her knees remain together. This ensures a tight entry point for you, vaginal or anal. Your job is to touch her back and grab her hips; women love the feeling of gruff hands gripping their skin. Start slow, making sure to draw out and in fully. You will both feel the growl come out.

Bonus Tip: She can reach under and grab your flailing bits. With a gentle massage, you'll climax in minutes.

The Mount: This Kama Sutra position is all about domination. Roll her onto her stomach and spread her legs. Give her oral from behind. Then, penetrate her. Lay on top of her and kiss her neck. Whisper to her, "Cross your ankles." Immediately, you both will feel the change in tightness. Continue the rhythm until you both reach climax.

Bonus Tip: Hold her elbows or wrists down for an extra sexy sensation. You'll get great leverage from this too.

If the boat is a rockin': On a couch or chair, sit and allow her to spread on top of you. Once entered, lock your arms around her legs and draw them toward your chest. Naturally, her back will slide against your legs. You can push and pull her against you or push upwards from your buttocks for the ultimate entry. She can stabilize herself against the floor, fully extending her arms and back. Scream, moan and talk to her. Rock, back and forth, until you make her orgasm. You'll have a full view of her body and lady parts. Enjoy the scenery.

Kama Sutra is all about reaching the ultimate tantric pleasures. Be free and wild with it and encourage your partner to do so as well. In allowing the openness and expressiveness, you will reach new orgasmic heights together. It will become addictive and you both can explore all that a fulfilling sex life has to offer.

For women, these poses allow the vagina to open in ways the common positions do not allow, for a deeper orgasm. For men, a barbaric side is awakened and you are able to fully view your woman as never before.

Kama Sutra all night and day, Kasanova.

BUSINESS

The Secret of

If you want to be a successful entrepreneur or business man/woman you need to understand one critical trait of professional entrepreneurs. They always listen to themselves and their intuition above anyone else's opinions.

Yes, professionals do have carefully chosen mentors who give them advice, but most of what they hear they do not believe without their own research and experience on the subject.

When talking finances and business with most people, I find that they are incredibly negative and ignorant. They want you to fail at your business because it justifies their existence as employees. As a matter of fact most of the people I know, even my close friends, gave me tons of crap while I was starting my company. They thought I was wasting my time and money.

Sure I failed over and over again, but I eventually figured it out as I knew all along I would. However, my friends did not see that, they only saw the failure and thought I was crazy. But each time I fell I got one step closer to my goal.

Most of the people you know base most of their opinions on:

- * What their friends and family tell them
- * What they see and hear on T.V.
- * What they read in the paper
- * Their fears

Fear can be defined as: false education appearing real.

Most of the stuff you are hearing out of people's mouths is simply their ignorant view, rather than facts or educated opinions. Most people will also dismiss something just because they don't understand it.

Henry Ford understood this well. When he wanted to mass produce the automobile in the 1900's people told him he was crazy. At the time no one ever imagined that someday everybody could afford and be driving an automobile. Henry Ford did. Good thing he didn't listen to everyone who told him he was crazy.

Professional Entrepreneurs

When Henry Ford wanted to build a V-8 engine his engineers also told him it was impossible to build an eight cylinder engine. Mr. Ford had no idea how to build a V-8 engine either, but he believed it could and would be done.

After over a year and a half of struggle, frustration and repeated attempts to tell Mr. Ford the task was impossible, his engineers finally developed the V-8 engine. Only their high salary kept them working on the project for so long. Again, it is a good thing Mr. Ford did not listen to anyone else besides his own inner voice. He also had a lot more persistence than his engineers.

The idea of Federal Express was started years ago in college by a student designing a business of his own for a thesis assignment. He saw the opportunity of flying packages instead of just shipping them on the ground. This way packages could be sent across the country overnight and all over the world at a much more efficient pace.

He got an F on the assignment and the professor told him it was the dumbest business idea he had ever heard of. The dean corrected the grade and gave him a B- because it was well written. But he also laughed at the student who thought packages could be put on planes and said, "Planes are for people, not packages."

Because this student did not listen to them he revolutionized the way the world sends mail, started one of the most successful mail carrying companies in the world, and he opened lines of worldwide communication.

I am not saying not to take advice, just be careful on who you are taking your advice from, and always listen to yourself and your intuition above all else.

World's Top 5

MOST EXPENSIVE PRIVATE JETS

Bombardier Global Express XRS
Images provided courtesy of Bombardier Inc

Cost and technological advancement are concepts that can be rather illusory while discussing private aviation. An attempt to define the most expensive private jet is in and of itself a red herring. Personal aircrafts are still commodities meant to be tailor-fit to need and purpose creating a wildly variable degree in price difference between private jets. To simplify the selection process there are many manufacturer-approved outfitters who offer a limited choice of cabin layouts and arrangements, often released for sale with only the factory flight systems and electronics. These configurations are commonplace, and dutifully so as this process saves time providing practical and economical solutions to client needs, although aircraft that arrive in this flavor are hardly the most expensive toys on the block.

World's Top 5

MOST EXPENSIVE PRIVATE JETS

If your ultimate goal is to abandon sense and reason to own the most eccentric, expensive and technologically advanced personal jet on the planet, you might consider a closed-door meeting with Ian Waitz, Randy Babbitt and George Lucas about a Boeing 747-8 Intercontinental redesign and retrofit. Otherwise in the scope of practicality, you may be better off selecting from the following five aircraft, suitable as both relatively turn-key and easily manageable, though will hardly leave you wanting (listed in ascending order by price): Airbus A318 Elite, Bombardier Global Express XRS, Embraer Lineage 1000, Boeing BBJ 737-700, and Gulfstream G650.

Please note that these prices are estimates and may vary depending on cabin configuration, inclusion or exclusion of additional equipment, or brokerage and outfitter services not mentioned in this article.

The A318 Elite by Airbus is priced at $43 Million and is available in a wide array of cabin arrangements from closely tied third-party outfitters. Two Pratt & Whitney PW6000 engines providing a combined maximum thrust of 48,000 pounds can carry this aircraft 4,000 nautical miles without refueling. The A318 Elite's flight ceiling is at 41,000 feet and it has a maximum cruise speed of 543 knots. The cockpit is equipped with Thales/VDO EFIS avionics equipment. In regard to general dimensions, this A318 is 103.17 feet long, has a 111.83 foot wing-span, and additionally provides 7.4 feet of cabin height allowing nearly anyone to move about freely without feeling constricted.

Bombardier's Global Express XRS.
Images provided courtesy of Bombardier Inc.

Bombardier's Global Express XRS can travel a maximum range of 6,150 nautical miles with a top cruise speed of 590 knots, making it the second quickest private jet in this class and price range. Costing $46 Million, the XRS can also reach a maximum cruising altitude of 51,000 feet where there is less competing air traffic and the winds are more favorable. Its cabin height is 6.25 ft, while having a 99.4 foot exterior length and 94 foot wing-span. Controlled by a Rockwell Collins ProLine Fusion flight control system, this aircraft's twin Rolls-Royce BR710 A2-20 produce a combined 29,500 pounds of thrust.

Costing $49 Million, the Embraer Lineage 1000 can travel a maximum distance of 4,500 nautical miles before refueling. It can fly at a 41,000 foot altitude and has a 542 knot maximum cruising speed. Creating a combined 40,000 pounds of thrust, the Lineage 1000 is affixed with two GE CF34-10E7-B power-plants. Honeywell provides their Primus Epic avionics system as the nerve center of this aircraft. This is the longest private jet in our comparative selection having a nose-to-tail length of 118.92 feet and a 94.25 foot wing-span, while the interior of the cabin stands an average 6.68 feet tall.

Embraer Lineage 1000

The Boeing BBJ 737-700 is priced with an average base configuration at $52 Million. Its twin CFM International CFM56-7 engines produce an astounding 54,600 pounds of total thrust, while only managing to achieve a top cruising speed of 521 knots at 41,000 feet. This aircraft's clear focus is overall economics as it can travel up to 6,135 nautical miles non-stop. Its cabin measures 7.03 feet tall, and the exterior length stretches to 110.33 feet with a 117.42 foot wing-span. The cockpit in the BBJ 737-700 is furnished with a Rockwell Collins flight control system.

The new G650 by Gulfstream tops our comparative list costing an average of $58 Million. This aircraft does not tout its price on name-sake alone, as it's also the best performing jet in this class. Two Rolls-Royce BR725 A1-12 turbofans create 32,200 pounds of combined thrust giving the G650 its ability to travel up to 7,000 nautical miles with a max cruising speed of 611 knots. Like the XRS, this Gulfstream also has a top flight altitude of 51,000 feet. Gulfstream's PlaneView II avionics system monitors and controls this personal jet. It has a 6.42 foot interior cabin height while measuring 99.76 feet in overall length and 99.58 feet across the wings.

Embraer Lineage 1000 Lounges & Workstations

*Even among these five private options, there is no clear overall winner by price-point or features. Each may very well be the appropriate choice depending on need and intended use. The XRS and the G650 are as close as they come in terms of ability and size. While comparing the two, the G650 is only about fifteen-percent better with a heftier price tag. If you've no time nor the interest to conspire with Mr. Lucas about something new and space age, any one of these private jets will draw extreme envy and awe, no matter where you land it.

Fierce FORD GT

STORY BY: TERENCE MADDISON | PHOTOS BY: FORD

The Ford GT was Ford's attempt at recreating the legendary 1966 Ford GT 40 sports car that beat Ferrari in the Le Mans, four times! I think they out did themselves, there is no denying that.

The 2006 GT captures all of the sensual lines and pure masculinity of its predecessor. Looking at the car there is visually little difference, it is absolutely beautiful to look at. However, that's where the similarities end.

The car has been completely redesigned for the 21st century using advanced materials and manufacturing processes. The GT is a little bit broader, longer and stands 3 inches higher than the original, but you wouldn't be able to tell unless you had both cars sitting side by side.

The reason the GT does not carry the GT40 badge is because the company that bought the licensing rights in the 60's could not come to an agreement with Ford at time of production. So Ford used the GT designation instead.

This car was built using many new and unique technologies, some of which are super-plastic formed aluminum body panels which is a radically new way of making car panels.

The process goes like this; they heat an aluminum panel to about 500 degrees, then they use high pressure air to form the panel over a one piece die enabling them to be able to create the complex curved pieces used on the GT. It also saved on tooling costs.

Then there are the roll bonded floor panels, and for the center tunnel, they invented a new way of bonding metal called friction stir welding. It also has an incased fuel tank for safety reasons. The fuel tank is actually mounted in the center tunnel.

The GT also boasts totally reworked aerodynamics. It has a front splitter which aides in front end down force, and then there are the side splitters that prevent air sliding under the rocker panels. It has a smooth enclosed belly pan to stop underbody turbulence. Last but not least, a venturi, runs the back of the car, which practically sucks the car to the ground, making it handle like a slot car.

It has double wish-bone suspension all the way around. Powering this beast is a 5.4 Liter V-8, that produces 500 horse power and 500 foot-pounds of torque giving the GT neck snapping power; all this while meeting the emissions and durability standards. These numbers are comparable to the fully blue-printed race-prepared 427 (7.0 Liter V-8) found in the Ford GT race cars.

The GT has an all aluminum block fitted with four -valve cylinder heads which are high flowing to pump more fuel to the cylinders. It also has dual over head cams. Internally, the engine has a forged steel crankshaft to be able to handle all the power and torque this motor machine produces. It has shot-peened H-beam connecting rods and forged aluminum pistons. Not surprising is that 85% of the reciprocating parts are unique to the GT. The massive amounts of fuel the engine needs to perform like a supercar are delivered by dual fuel injectors per cylinder. A modified screw-type supercharger blowing through a water to air intercooler, handles the job of providing the GT with enough airflow to feed the engines demands.

The interior of the GT is a close reproduction of the original, obviously with all new materials and gauges. The seats also have the ventilation holes like the original and it also has modernized toggle switches for the auxiliary functions. (Really cool). The interior is surprisingly roomy for a sports car, although storage space is kept to a minimum. Ford has done a wonderful job of recreating the legendary GT40 for the 20th century. It has overwhelming performance stats and is reliable enough to be a daily driver too.

This car screams masculinity and I wouldn't be surprised if you owned one, you would have no problem getting a few dates just filling your tank.

Most Important Rules of Money Management

The lack of money is often not our problem, it is the way we spend it. Wealthy people tend to spend money on things that increase in value or provide them with a return on their investment.

People who are not wealthy spend the bulk of their money on items that perish, depreciate or have no return on their investment. Even the family home, which is often the most expensive item that most people purchase, usually provides no return on their large capital outlay.

There is one main reason why people get themselves into financial difficulties. They simply spend more than they earn. The two ways of increasing wealth is to either increase our income, or decrease our expenditure.

Unfortunately, through increased exposure to advertising and access to products, we are constantly enticed into having more and more material possessions. The easiest way to resist this temptation is to establish a plan where we always save a little of our income and learn to control our debt. If we do this consistently and regularly, we will eventually form a habit - a good, lasting habit that will overcome our financial difficulties and lead us to financial freedom.

Money is there to provide security, satisfaction and joy in our lives, and we can have some of life's little luxuries along the way. However, while we are learning to manage our finances, we need to control our spending and allocate our money according to our needs.

Initially, this means we may have to eliminate wastage and extravagance, and identify the things we really need to lead happy, fulfilling lives. We need to remain conscious around our spending. We need to remind ourselves that every cent we spend - does count! Initially, this may mean we have to cut back a little, but it is only directed at wastage and extravagance.

I believe that extravagance and over-spending is just the other side of the 'scarcity' coin. It is often the belief that there is not enough that leads us into buying too much. It requires a mature, practical approach, which is within all of us, to become great financial managers.

All it takes is a little planning, a little discipline, and often a bit of self-talk are all that is required. It just takes a moment to stop and remind ourselves to think long-term, not short-term.

The trick to economizing is actually quite simple. Before you part with your money, always ask, "Do I really need this? Will I end up wasting this? Is this an extravagance I can live without?" If you develop a little voice in your head every time time you go shopping that asks you these three simple questions, and you listen to and obey the answers, you will automatically start to economize.

Economizing is not about living frugally. It is not about being miserly and not sharing your money. It is not about penny pinching and living without the things you really need. Economizing is simply about not wasting your money, not being extravagant and not buying things you cannot afford.

Here are a few ideas to help resist the urge to spurge:

1. Keep focused on your long-term financial goals.
2. Prepare a monthly actual-to-budget variance analysis of where you spent your money. This may seem tedious but it always works wonders. Initially we may have good intentions but as time progresses, temptation can take over. If we see how we fared with our spending each month, it pulls us back a little. If we don't see it, we tend to forget and the overspending can easily get away from us.
3. Carry a small card in your wallet detailing your budget for luxury items. When that is spent - stop, and wait until next month.
4. Only buy what you need. Remember, wastage and extravagances are just the other side of the scarcity coin.
5. Learn to nurture yourself in less expensive ways. A $30 massage may be better than that $200 new dress.
6. Set up a separate savings account to reward yourself with the occasional luxury fantasy; maybe a weekend at some fabulous retreat. By putting away small amounts of your budget, you can save up for those sensational rewards rather than fritter it away on useless $5 or $10 items each week.

There is always the tendency to spend when we should be saving. The surplus money comes in and our automatic response is to go out and spurge. This is the very behavior we need to address before we can become financially stable.

We need to keep reminding ourselves of the one of the most important rules of money management: "Spend less than you earn", and then - and only then - can we surge ahead along the path to financial freedom...

Sex, Vegas, and Business with The Maloof Brothers

Come play in the sandbox of life, Vegas, with the good old boys, Joe and Gavin Maloof. Owners of the Palms Casino Resort in Las Vegas, as well as the Kings NBA Basketball team, they prove it's just the beginning for their Billion Dollar Boys Club. THE MALOOF BROTHERS: HARD WORKING AND NICER THAN YOU'D THINK. GIVING ADVICE ON WOMEN, GAMBLING, AND MONEY. LISTEN UP GOOD.

BY CHELSEA DILLON-MILLER

Ever wonder what it would be like to be a billionaire? We sat down with two of them. Joe and Gavin Maloof are anything but the typical CEOs. Perhaps that is what has propelled them into their current franchise owning stardom.

Actually, they've held up this level of fame for over 15 years. It all started small and humble back in their home state of New Mexico, but these executive owners direct and manage multiple Maloof Corporations, including sports teams, hotels, casinos, a production and music company along with a corporate giving level of over 15 million. What do they earn if they can donate that amount?

The Maloof net worth is estimated at well over 1 billion dollars.

Time to retire? Never. Joe and Gavin aren't willing to give it up any time soon. They love their jobs, "You have to in order to succeed," they both say. These self proclaimed macro-managers (the opposite of micromanagers) believe in their brand and impact, hoping to keep growing with their two main companies long past 2020.

Behind their exclusive lifestyle is a third generation Lebanese family who built the American dream. Basketball and casinos are just the cherry on top. The Maloof brothers work constantly to uphold a tradition started long ago by their grandfather and father. The ball won't drop as long as they're on the court, its "day by day" as second eldest Gavin notes. To them it's worth every penny. Literally.

"We were never given anything. We worked for all of it. Every day. Starting with our father at the bottom. Sweeping, packing and distributing for him. We learned a business from the ground up. We worked holidays in the liquor distribution industry. New Years, July 4th, Labor Day: Those are your best working days. We've always had a strong work ethic," says Joe Maloof.

They love the work and all that comes along with it. That's how you become an entrepreneur, "It's the plan Harvard teaches, find a need and fill it," says Gavin. "You've got to have a passion for it and promote a quality product. You always want to stand behind quality."

We'd like to tell you these gentlemen have threesomes every night and work two hours a day on their iPADS next to a pool. The truth is, these brothers play hard, but work harder. There might have been a night or two of debauchery; we'll never kiss and tell. But when it comes to business, these brothers gamble all in. "You have to take risks," says Gavin, "some business owners aren't willing to take the risk."

That's the Maloof motto and if you're interested in ever reaching the likes of their pocketbooks, you'll listen up closely and follow these never before heard steps.

THE MALOOF MONEY AND MANHOOD, HERE'S HOW.

As if owning The Palms Casino Resort in Las Vegas and the Sacramento Kings NBA Basketball franchise, including its ARCO arena, wasn't enough these business brothers constantly make P.R. appearances anywhere from Los Angeles, Sacramento, and Las Vegas to New York City. Jet setter lifestyle: Yes. What you think it is? Not even close.

"Not everyone is cut out to own and run a business," says Gavin, "There's no such thing as a 9-5 when you're an entrepreneur. My phone is on during holidays, sometimes until 1 am in the morning. To be an entrepreneur is a 24/7 gig." He has a cheerful tone while he answers questions. There's a sense of pride and accomplishment mixed with what seems like continuous and high expectations, even now, even at this point in his career.

Take time off? Nah. This single CEO admits that the public sees the women and the partying, but what they don't see? "We work very hard, extremely hard. And, we're very conservative. They (the public) don't see that part." According to Joe, the eldest of five Maloof siblings, "When we're long gone, our three nephews will take over. This will always be a family business."

That's their first key to success. They work with and for people they trust. And, are related to. "It doesn't always work for everyone, but we're blessed to have been able to keep all of our businesses in the family. Our father died when I was 25 and Gavin was 24. From there, we could have chosen two avenues: 1.) Sell the business and lay on a beach somewhere, OR, 2.) Work. "We chose to work," quotes Joe.

What's the moral of the story here? You want it, you gotta work for it. And by work, we mean 40+ years. The Maloof brothers started as sweepers and stockers to their father's drink distribution and promotion company. "Our family has been in the beer supply industry for over 100 years," Gavin says.

Their grandfather Joseph Maloof, a Lebanese immigrant, started a supply store in the tiny Las Vegas town of New Mexico. Selling lard, sugar and even shoes at his general store, their father George Maloof Sr. took over that supply mentality and began representing high profile brands with liquor distributions such as Jack Daniel's and Galla Wines up until the 1970s. That's the point where the business took off. The family invested in New Mexican hotels followed by a string of several banks in the 1980s. The New Mexico National bank they invested in transferred to First Security in Utah, which was then purchased by Wells Fargo.

The brothers were in good standing by the 1990s and purchased the Fiesta Hotel in Las Vegas in 1991. Then, they created The Palms in 1994 which opened in 2001 and the rest they say, is history.

A little savings account later and they were able to accomplish a lifelong dream, owning a national sports franchise. The Kings were up for sale and the Maloof's wrote the check.

To date, the Kings and ARCO stadium, owned by the Maloofs for 10 years, have advanced to the NBA Playoffs, won back-to-back Pacific Division titles and advanced to the Western Conference Finals. The Maloof Brothers are, arguably, the ultimate sports fans. They just happen to own the team, too.

Visionaries? Absolutely. Expert businessmen? Hands down. But when asked the generator to their growing success, Gavin notes, "You have to be a great marketer. We grew up with it. It was bred into us. We promoted Coors, PBR, Corona, and Jack Daniel's for our dad." That's where it began. They learned to sell to targeted audiences. They learned to keep an eye out for the cracks that everyone else stepped over. A Maloof wouldn't even say "crack," they would say "opportunity."

Seem impossible? Listen to this little story. Eldest brother Joe Maloof was driving down Pacific Coast Highway in Los Angeles when the business plan of a lifetime skated right past him. Joe just kept passing skateboarder after skateboarder and realized, this is the new Little League. He called Gavin and said, "We should get into this skateboarding scene." A little research later and the Maloof boys come to find out that skateboarding is currently ranked as the most popular young person's sport in the world, only second to soccer. They back it up with statistics, "There are over 9 million little leaguers, and skateboarding is far more popular these days," says Gavin.

They have a huge respect for sports and athleticism, all having competed in the High School and Collegiate levels in football or basketball. Skateboarding to them was the new and cool scene. So what'd they do? They went and started a business for it.

The Maloof Money Cup is the premier skateboarding showcase and competition, started in 2008 by Joe and Gavin. The foundation supports skateboarding training, up-and-comers, US Pro Men's and Women's Street Championships, the US Pro Vert Championships and the Maloof Money Cup AM Championships. It is currently running in Los Angeles, New York, Washington D.C., and South Africa. This whole business model landed out of a passion for sports and sharing it with youngsters, according to the brothers. "We had started a basketball camp in Sacramento and were looking for the next thing."

The Maloof Family

We really blazed our own trail and five years ago got into the skate industry. We listened to the professionals and to the industry and now our vision has become a global brand,” notes Joe.

A testament to their business skills, both men credit hiring experts and “letting them do their job” as a key factor to all of their corporation’s success. They don’t micromanage, they direct. Joe says positivity is something one has to fight for everyday individually and in business; it’s a theme maintained in every company they run. “Keep things fun and be passionate about it,” he says.

One thing follows these guys throughout their life: passion and inspiration. Gavin notes it’s one of the top three things to a successful business, along with dedication and a quality product. Others might add PR to this long list of family owned businesses by the master marketers. Lastly, both brothers agree, drive and plain old work gets the job done. They’re always on call. And, always happy to take a call.

“We’re in the entertainment and hospitality business. The word cater does not bother the Maloofs. We love that word. It’s that old fashioned business sense. Anybody can say they’ll do it. But, do you execute it?” challenges Joe to the average business man. Their family has rolled out the red carpet and satisfied celebrities from all walks of life. “That’s one of the best parts of our job,” quotes Joe, “we get to meet and befriend some awesome people. Old Hollywood used to play in L.A., new Hollywood plays in Vegas.”

Here comes the list... The Maloof family has socialized with the likes of: Paris Hilton, Britney Spears, The Kardashians, the Jersey Shore cast, Tiger Woods, Beyonce, Jay-Z, Lady Gaga, Ludacris, Lindsay and Ali Lohan, the late DJ AM, Carlos Santana, Dr. Dre, Eminem, and The Killers, just to name a few.

The Palms, among being the most popular hotel in Vegas, hosts numerous annual celebrity events, including UFC and WEC promotions, music videos for Eminem and Katy Perry, and the infamous 2007 MTV Music Video awards, featuring Britney Spear’s come back. Previously, the Palms hosted MTV’s The Real World: Las Vegas back in 2002 followed by younger brother George Maloof’s partnership with Playboy and Hugh Hefner. George does a “stellar” job say both older brothers, he manages the Palms and they give him “all the credit” when speaking about the Playboy Club and famous Playboy Suites within the Casino Resort. With scantily-clad bunnies greeting every guest at the Playboy Club and Playboy Suites stocked with full bars and skyline swimming pools, at $40k per night, the Maloofs swung a hell of a business deal with Hugh Hefner, “He’s the ultimate gentleman. We enjoy that partnership and it has worked out well for both sides.”

BOTTOM LINE: THESE BOYS TAKE CARE OF BUSINESS, AND THAT’S HOW THEY STAY IN BUSINESS.

Here's a couple more gems straight from the mouths of The Maloof Brothers:

Kasanova: How old are you?

Joe: 55

Gavin: 54

Kasanova: We heard your father owned the Houston Rockets basketball team before he passed, correct?

Joe: Oh yes, we're a big basketball family.

Gavin: We think basketball is the greatest sport in the world.

Kasanova: Do you play poker in your own casinos?

Joe: No. It's against the Gambling Association rules for an owner to play. I used to play in my 30s. Want some advice? Straight from the "University of Maloof," what they don't teach you at Harvard? Here's my best gambling advice:

- 1.) Never drink and play.
- 2.) Take it seriously.
- 3.) Know the game and the odds.
- 4.) Don't show off, especially in front of women.
- 5.) Gamble by yourself, or with really good friends.
- 6.) Learn how to walk away.
- 7.) Pace yourself. The best thing about gambling is the anticipation. Make is last. Don't hit the tables right away. Unpack your luggage. Take a shower. See a show. Go on a date. See a movie. Go for a swim. Eat at a restaurant. Don't play your money on a table until the end of the trip.

Kasanova: Do you like being your own boss?

Joe: Yes, it's fun.

Gavin: It's a good life. We work hard for it.

Kasanova: Who do you get to hang out with?

Joe: Katie Perry, Lil' Wayne, Lil' John- they're our friends. We've been in their music videos and songs.

Gavin: Barry Bonds, Michael Phelps, Brian Sheckler.

Kasanova: Are you single?

Joe: Yes, we all are. We've never been married. I think there's still hope for us though.

Gavin: Yes.

Kasanova: What do you look for in a woman?

Joe: At the end of the day, you've got to be able to have fun with someone.

Gavin: A good person with a good heart. Looks are great but they can fade. The inside never fades.

Kasanova: Where'd you go to high school?

Joe: In Albuquerque, at Highland High. With the creators of Beavis and Butthead. Did you know that? They went to school with us.

Kasanova: Where'd you go to college?

Gavin: A small school, it was a good experience. It's called San Antonio Trinity College.

Kasanova: What's the best part of your job?

Joe: We're grateful for our family, that we've been able to stick together, for our health, and the happiness it's created. Also, we get to meet all these different types of people from all walks of life.

Kasanova: What are your goals?

Joe: To keep the businesses going, and when we're done, pass them onto our nephews.

Gavin: We want to keep the focus on our two corporations, the Kings and the Palms. We want to encourage growth and keep stepping forward, day by day.

Kasanova: What's been your greatest business recognition or honor to date?

Joe: Being named the CNN hero of the week for the work we do with the Maloof Money Cup. We hold a three day competition in New York City. We want to keep building skate parks and donating them to the community. We like the work we do with this project.

Kasanova: What's something the public doesn't know about you?

Joe: I go to bed at 9:30 pm after the Kings game and rise at 5:30 am.

Gavin: We're conservative.

Kasanova: What's something you do every day, and can't live without?

Joe: I check www.hoopshype.com.

Gavin: I hang out at the Palms and eat lunch. I don't have an office here in Vegas. So, I'm on my phone all the time and hang out in the coffee shop or at the restaurant here.

Kasanova: What are your hobbies?

Joe: Tennis. And, I love my dogs. We like to spend time with our nephews too.

Gavin: Golf.

Kasanova: What's your best business advice?

Gavin: Take risks.

HOW DO I TAKE THE "CRAZY" OUT OF THE COOL CHIC?
SIGNED, IN CRAZY LAND

Dear In Crazy Land,

This one is interesting. Most girls are cool...But sometimes if they develop emotional feelings for you they may start to verbalize their emotional feelings to you, and for most men this can sound like a different language. When a girl acts "crazy" it's most likely because she has feelings for you, that you either are not reciprocating or are not verbally reassuring her that you feel the same. Test the theory. If you become more affectionate with this "crazy" girl, that is if you want to or your feelings warrant it, then she will most likely relax and feel more "emotionally safe" in the relationship with you. The best way to avoid "craziness" is to be honest about the state of the relationship. Let her know where she stands. If you're not ready for a serious relationship, let her know. She will have to accept it, and walk away or stay with understanding. If you do have feelings for her, tell her...Assure her you care...and be willing to be considerate of her feelings by your actions and words. This should cool the cattiness out of your sweet kitten right away.

SIGNED PROSPEROUS OR PUMPED

Dear Prosperous or Pumped,

AH-Ha....The old age question...Looks or money? Well, not all girls are the same. Some overlook looks just to be with a sugar daddy that spoils her...Others are seeking a hot body and could care less about dollar signs. KASANOVA thinks the best way to land the girl of your dreams is to be the complete package. Make sure you are taking good care of yourself and your appearance. Eat well, work-out, groom, and dress with style...And make sure you are progressing financially. Have or get a good job, have goals and work hard to achieve them. Women want men who are a little of both...Good looking, at least in their eyes, and who have potential to be a good provider. Now it's not all about her...If you want to be a man, you have to take care of your body and your life. Be responsible for yourself and your actions, both personally and professionally. Do this, and you'll have no shortage of women who are interested in you... Looks or money.

I'M SEEING THIS GIRL AND I REALLY LIKE HER. THE CATCH IS SHE WANTS NO STRINGS ATTACHED. WHAT DO I DO?
SIGNED, ATTACHED WITH "NO STRINGS"

Dear Attached with No Strings,

Relationships like this can be tricky. The fact is most people will develop an emotional attachment the more time they spend together and the more intimate they become. You could save time and avoid heartbreak, and let her know how you really feel now. If she's adamant about "no strings attached," she clearly is not ready for or looking for an emotional attachment, and she will stay stoic, leaving you longing for more. Then you have your answer and she's not the girl for you. Or you could just go with it and let time do the trick of letting her bond with you, because if the time comes for her to have to let you go...she won't want to, or she won't be able to. Be sure to give her the affection she would get from someone else in a relationship. Be sweet to her...Without even realizing it, she'll be attached. Then you have her. Just be patient...Some of the best things take time. Let the friendship between you grow, and as you continue to bond between the sheets...Things may change. Remember, she wouldn't be sleeping with you, if she wasn't into you. That already puts you ahead of the rest.

I WANT TO MAKE SURE I'M GOOD IN BED. ANY TIPS?
SIGNED, KASANOVA WANNA BE

Dear KASANOVA Wanna Be,

Being good in bed is a combination of sensuality, chemistry, and skills. Being sensual is making sure that every kiss is passionate, every touch has the intention of pleasing, and every sex act has her climax in mind. Take your time caressing, kissing, and touching key erogenous zones; nape of the neck, ears, inner thighs, buttocks, behind the knees, feet, wrists, breasts (nipples) and the clitoris. These will heighten the experience for any woman. Chemistry is what exists between two people that make them attracted to each other and sexually aroused by each other. It may be looks (some women may find you very attractive, while others may not), pheromones (the scent of your body created by hormones) or a cologne scent that arouses her senses. The greater the

Dear Wanting Her,

Dating your buddies ex-girlfriend or girlfriend for that matter is a strict no-no. Of course, you could always ask your buddy if he would be cool with it, but I wouldn't recommend that. If you value your friendship with him, rather leave her alone, and look elsewhere. There are plenty of fish in the sea. It's just not worth it to tangle your lines with a friend.

Dear Frozen,

You can build your social confidence by improving your self talk. Next time you go out, tell yourself at least 10 times, "I am good-looking, I am confident, and women love me." This will help curb any insecurity you have when in their presence. Also, remember, whenever you want to approach a woman, start the conversation with a compliment. It's a great ice-breaker. I HAVE THIS PROBLEM OF PRE-EJACULATION. IS SOMETHING WRONG WITH ME? WHAT CAN I DO TO STOP THIS? PLEASE HELP! SIGNED, KASANOVA IN WAITING

Dear KASANOVA In Waiting,

Don't be alarmed. In fact, a majority of men suffer from pre-mature ejaculation and it is actually considered the most common sexual dysfunction. It is more common among younger men. Don't worry...You are not alone.

The fact is that most men are not great lovers yet. That is a fact. This is a learning process like everything else. Your partner is not going to expect you to be perfect. Remember, she is probably just as nervous about her own performance anxiety too.

Now you're going to have to build your endurance like an athlete builds his endurance for pain and physical strength. It's the same principle, but a different approach.

Relaxation techniques like meditation and slow breathing can help you overcome this. Try this while you masturbate. Remember to control your breathing and your bodies' reaction to the pleasure feelings and the excitement it causes. When you are about to blow...Think of something non-sexual to learn to control the ejaculation and last longer. Do this until you get to a point where you are so aware of when you are about to ejaculate, how it feels and stop it with your mind. It's truly a mind over matter issue, and it works.

Exercising your PC muscles is a great aid as well and will not only strengthen your erections but your ability to control your ejaculations. The next time you urinate, stop in the middle of it, and hold off for ten seconds. The same muscle tensed to do that, is your PC muscle that controls the shooting power of your ejaculation. You can exercise this muscle anytime, anywhere.

Just practice tensing it and releasing. As you continue to practice, learn to tense the PC muscle for longer intervals. We recommend starting for 10 seconds, then releasing. You will definitely start to see results in your control ability.

Remember, pre-mature ejaculation is very normal and it can be overcome. Try these simple techniques and keep them in mind always. As you do...you'll begin to see positive changes in your ability to control yourself, your mind, and your body. You'll be a KASANOVA in no time.

LYING: Women are very intuitive and can always sense a lie. Even if you never confess, she'll always know you lied to her. This can gnaw at the trust in any relationship. Honesty is the key to success with any woman. Even if you think a little white lie is harmless, it causes more damage than you realize.

- 2 CHEATING: Women want you to be honest about who you are. So if you're in a relationship and you really want to enjoy being a bachelor, have the balls to say so. Don't cheat. It shows no class, and it wastes people's lives.
- 3 ORAL HYGIENE/BAD BREATH: Listen gentleman, make sure you brush twice a day and floss at least once. A dirty mouth is great in the bedroom, but not for kissing. Lack of dental care can also cause bad breath and no gum can counteract lack of cleanliness in the mouth. So brush away, and twice a day!
- 4 LACK OF NAIL GROOMING: Manicures and pedicures are not just for the ladies. When a woman notices a man with long or dirty finger or toe nails, it's a deal breaker! She won't want you touching her with your filthy paws or playing footsie with her underneath the sheets. So make an appointment today. You'll feel much better about your well-groomed hand and feet too.
- 5 NO MAN-SCAPING: No woman wants to navigate a wild jungle, so it is vitally important to man-scape your private parts. It's okay to shave the surrounding skin areas, and trim your hairs, including pubic, nose, and pits. Trust me, she'll show her appreciation in more ways than one.
- 6 MALE FLATULENCE: Guys, we all know farting and burping is completely normal, but women don't want to be exposed to it. So keep your male flatulence-private! Make a point to leave the room. You want to maintain the sexual attraction between the two of you, and overt maleness in her presence won't exactly make her think you're a Prince. Keep it for the boys.
- 7 ROUGH-HOUSING WITH YOUR FRIENDS: Women see this as a sign of immaturity and lack of self-control. Besides, you don't want to put her in a position where she has to play referee. And you know sometimes these play times can get aggressive. Women don't like it. Remember, when you're in the presence of a lady, don't behave like a 7 year old boy. She'll respect you for it.
- 8 JEALOUSY OR CONTROLLING BEHAVIOR: Women want to be with a secure, confident man. Being jealous and controlling shows that you are not secure and confident, and that you have issues. A woman wants a partner, a friend, not a prison warden to keep her company.
- 9 NEGATIVE ATTITUDE: A woman spends time with a man to make her life better, not to bring her down. So avoid excessive complaining about anything. Keep the conversations light, fun, and positive.
- 10 NO STYLE SENSE: Word to the wise, never wear denim on denim and if your sneakers are more than a year old, get new ones. Women notice the style of every man, from shoes to hairstyle. So it's important to take pride in your appearance and that means your fashion sense too.
- 11 OGLING AT OTHER WOMEN: When you are in the presence of a woman, the key to success with her is to make her feel like she's the only woman in the room. Keep your attention focused on her. You have to consciously not look at other women out of respect for yours. Such behavior will make her think you are immature, unsteady and a womanizer who is merely interested in chasing skirts rather than in a relationship.
- 12 MOVING TOO FAST: It's understandable that you get excited, but keep your cool. A kiss doesn't mean it's going to lead to an overnight stay, especially on the first few dates. If you try to move too fast, women will think you are desperate and only interested in one thing. So have some respect for her and yourself, and relax.
- 13 SAYING YOU'LL DO SOMETHING AND THEN DON'T: Women love follow-through. It shows you're a man of your word and that she can trust you. This is huge for women. A desirable man is one of reliability, consistency, and trustworthiness. Do what you say you're going to do...Always.
- 14 AFTER DARK CALLERS: Men have a reputation for only wanting one thing to begin with, so when you're only calling her at night and not to say Hi...it's rude, and she doesn't want to hear from you. The man that a woman wants, calls during the day and is interested in her daily life as well as what promise the night may or may not hold.
- 15 MAKING GENERAL STATEMENTS ABOUT WOMEN: Unless you've dated every woman on the planet, don't act like you have. Making generalized statements about women is ignorant and insulting. Women don't like being told what women like or what "they are all like" by men, because the fact is, you don't really know.

PERFECT

POSTURE POINTERS...

Hey KASANOVA, it's the newest addition to the Kasanova family, Liz the Lieb, trainer at large. I just have to say that after leaving the gym this past Monday, I realized that there are a few things that need to be addressed. But, before I say another word let me tell you a little about myself and what I can do for you! I am a Health and Fitness Professional and have been certified through the National Academy of Sports Medicine. I also have a BS in Sport Management with an emphasis on fitness and wellness. I specialize in correcting postural distortion patterns, and muscle imbalances.

Basically I take a body that is jacked up and tweak it until it works at its optimum level, therefore making you feel like Superman!

Pay close attention because the information I am about to share with you can and will change your body, your health, and your life for that matter. I've helped my male clients overcome all kinds of injuries including knee, back, lower back, shoulder, neck, foot, and even injuries in the glutes.

INJURIES ARE NO FUN, AND THE BEST WAY TO OVERCOME THEM, IS TO AVOID THEM IN THE FIRST PLACE!

I'm going to be straight up; do you have a pain in your ass? No, I'm not talking about your nagging wife or girlfriend but literally a pain in your ass? Maybe in your lower back or upper neck? Yep, it's there but most of you just ignore it and think it's from all those shrugs you've been doing. Well, let me tell you those shrugs aren't working and secondly that pain is a sign that something is not right. As I scanned the gym on Monday I took a count of how many men actually had good form. 1 out of 12!!! I'm going to cover the basics of good form, why it's important, and what will happen if you don't have proper form.

YOU HAVE 5 CHECK POINTS IN YOUR BODY: FEET, KNEES, HIPS, SHOULDERS, AND YOUR NECK.

These 5 check points need to be lined up at all times to keep our body functioning smoothly, and without errors. If one of these check points is out of line it will cause extra stress on your joints, wear and tear on your ligaments, and lastly cause muscles to do the wrong job leaving you with aches, pains, and injuries.

Let's start with your feet. Your feet are like the tires on your car...VERY IMPORTANT! Why do you get your alignment checked in your car? Easy, because if you don't, it could cause damage to your entire car. Your body is the same. Your feet need to ALWAYS be facing straight ahead at 12 o'clock, no matter what you are doing. I repeat, no matter what you are doing! Running, squatting, lunging, bicep curls, standing, you get the point.

Next up is your knees. They need to line up over your toes. Do not let your knees point out or in, especially when you are in a squat position. Do this to avoid back injuries. Trust me, those are the worst.

Third are your hips. A lot of business men have hips that pull forward, also known as an anterior pelvic tilt. This is because your hip flexors are tight from sitting at your desk all day. Make sure that your hips stay in a neutral position and are not pulling forward or backwards. If they do pull forward, perform the kneeling hip flexor stretch, and if they pull backwards, you need to stretch your hamstrings.

The fourth are your shoulders, another target area for business men, or all of you guys playing on Facebook all day. Most likely if you are at a desk all day for work, you have rounding of the shoulders. This means your chest is tight and your back is weak. By the way, national chest day every Monday and bouncing 500 lbs off your chest doesn't help your posture, it's only making it worse. Lay off the chest for a bit and stretch those muscles. Turn your attention to your lats and rhomboids (the muscles between your shoulder blades) to correct your shoulders.

Lastly, but not least is your neck. The only postural imbalance possible in the neck is a head that protrudes forward. For this you can stretch your neck by putting your ear to the shoulder and holding. Do each side for about thirty seconds. You can also stretch the back of the neck by putting your ear to your shoulder and then looking down towards your shoe. Hold for 30 seconds on each side. Being aware of the problem will help you change your posture and pull your chin closer to your head. To do this, just pretend that a chick you are definitely not into, is trying to come in for a smooch and you really dont want to kiss her. I bet you would pull your chin in pretty quick.

USE THESE TIPS TO HELP YOU GET YOUR POSTURE UNDER CONTROL AND PREVENT INJURIES IN THE FUTURE.

Best of Health,
Liz Lieberman

AUDI R8 FSI 5.2 V 10

BY TERENCE MADDISON PHOTOS: AUDI

The Audi R8 FSI 5.2 is the newest R8 Audi is offering to the public, it has two more cylinders and some subtle changes to the car. Some of which are the dual oval exhaust, larger side intakes for more air, reworked body work, front and back, for better aerodynamics and larger brakes to deal with the increased horse power. It also has unique LED headlights and the addition of a rear diffuser. It has beautiful lines with an aggressive stance and equally aggressive attitude.

It screams,
" Jump in and drive me !"

I really like the side panels on this car as well as the leather upholstery and for a supercar it has a surprisingly comfortable cabin with a good placement of gauges. It also comes equipped with MMI navigation system and all power accessories with a custom designed just for Audi Bang & Olufsen 465 watt 12-speaker sound system, it is also equipped with the Audi parking system with a back up camera.

The Audi R8 FSI 5.2 was first introduced to the public in 2009 at the North American International Auto Show in Detroit, and was created by Audi AG in their private high performance division company Quattro GmbH. The Audi R8 is based on the Lamborghini and is built on an Audi space frame and utilizes an aluminum monocoque center cradle to house the driver. The whole car is made of a blend of carbon fiber, magnesium and aluminum making it light weight and nimble. It is a two seat super car but it does have a decent amount of storage behind the seats.

The Audi R8 5.2L FSI V10 uses the same power plant that you will find in the Lamborghini LP560-4 slightly detuned for the Audi but still providing 525 horsepower at 8000rpm and 390 pound-feet of torque at 6500rpm. Delivering all that power to the ground through Audi's all wheel Quattro system, which in normal driving has a power distribution of 15-85 to the rear wheels. In hard driving, sends more power to the front wheels at a distribution of 30-70 to keep the cars power on all four wheels, and give it enhanced handling characteristics. The car has impressive 0-62 mph times of 3.9 seconds and top speed of 196 mph putting it into true supercar territory.

The Audi R8 FSI 5.2 comes with two transmission options, the six speed manual gear box that Audi claims gives the car a 12mpg city and 20mpg highway. Then you have the six speed R-Tronic automated manual gearbox that gives it slightly better fuel economy in the city at 13 mpg, the highway mpg stays the same. The Audi R8 5.2 FSI also has some cool technology under the body work. It is equipped with Bosh ESP (Electric stability control, which can be turned off with a push of a button, for a more spirited driving experience). It also comes with an anti-lock braking system (ABS), anti-slip regulation (ASR) and an electronic differential lock (EDL). The car has re-worked aluminum double wish bone suspension and comes with bigger 19inch wheels and larger brake rotors to make sure you can bring the car to a quick stop if there are any cops around.

The Audi R8 5.2 FSI comes in two versions, the coupe and the Spyder for those of us who like the wind blowing through our hair. Audi says besides strengthening the chassis for the Spyder, it is relatively unchanged from the coupe. The price for the Audi R8 5.2 FSI V10 standard options is $149,000 and the price for the Audi R8 5.2 FSI Spyder is $162,700. The Audi R8 inspires the hero in you and makes you feel like you can conquer the world and take on anything, all while being a distinguished gentleman. THIS CAR GETS AN A PLUS FROM ME. GO AND GET YOURSELF ONE.
